A comparative study of hydrogen bond interactions and intermolecular close contacts in 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8 substituted quinoline derivatives

o Dr. M. Prabhuswamy

Abstract

The quinoline ring being substituted by the functional groups such as methoxy, hydroxyl, bromine, nitrogen dioxide, and chlorophenyl at different positions exhibit planar conformation in quinoline derivatives, 8-Methoxymethylquinoline-4-ol (1), 3-Bromo-8-nitroquinoline (2), 2-(4-Chlorophenyl)methyl-4-(3-methylphenyl)quinoline (3) and 6,7-Dimethoxy-2,4-diphenylquinoline (4). The hydrogen bond interactions and inter molecular close contacts involved in the stabilization of crystal and molecular structure structures of 1, 2, 3 and 4 are compared via Hirshfeld surface analysis.

Keywords: Quinoline; Molecular structure; Hydrogen bond interaction; Hirshfeld surface.

1. Introduction

Quinoline derivatives play central role in the process of discovery of drugs because of their wide range of chemical reactivity and manifold biological activities. Different substituted quinolines were shown to be antibacterial [1], anti-inflammatory [2], antitubercular [3], antimalarial [4], anticancer [5], antibiotic [6], antihypertensive [7], tyrosine kinase platelet derived growth factor-receptor tyrosine kinase inhibitor [8], antihuman immunodeficiency virus [9], antimicrobial [10], antiviral [11], antitumor [12], immunomodulatory [13] antileishmanial [14] and antifungal [15]. They were found to be biological synthons and at present they are attracting much attention in the development of new drugs [16-18]. 2-Methoxyquinoline was used as an antimalarial drug and to prepare various newer antimalarial drugs. A comparison of antibacterial and antifungal activity of some novel quinoline

THE IMPACT OF COVID-19 ON INDIAN SOCIOECONOMIC STATUS IN INDIA: A REVISED SOCIOECONOMIC STATUS SCALE FOR THE YEAR 2021

Dr. Prabhuswamy M
Department of Science Education,
JSS Institute of Education, Sakleshpur,
Hassan District, Karnataka-573 134, India.

Abstract

Corona Virus Disease-2019 (COVID-19) pandemic had increased the financial burden of Indians by crippling the Indian economy and contributed less to the socioeconomic growth of India. The livelihood, employment and income of many citizens of India had remained questionable for many days during 2020. Socioeconomic scale (SES) measures individuals' access to financial, social, cultural and human capital, and the position of individual's family or household in the society. The SES of individuals and families are changing because of the dynamic nature of society. Individuals and families show changes in their present access to earnings, occupations and assets and they do vary according to the status of the origin of their families. Kuppuswamy socioeconomic status scale (KSES scale) is one of the widely used socioeconomic scales in social science research, educational research and community health research. The inflation in India during the financial year 2020-21 due to COVID-19 pandemic and changes in Consumer Price Index (CPI) further necessitates the revision of KSES for the year 2021. In this paper, the author has made an attempt to revise KSES scale for the year 2021 using CPI values and the corresponding rate of inflation. The revised KSES scale will be helpful to educationalists, sociologists, economists, historians and researchers when using socioeconomic status as one of the study variables.

Keywords: Corona virus, socioeconomic scale, Inflation, Consumer Price Index, income level.

Introduction

Coronavirus infected the people living in both vulnerable and affluent conditions in India to the larger extent in 2020. The Government of India implemented total lockdown from 25th March 2020, along with travel ban and social distancing and resulted a forced closure of production facilities and cascading effect on allied industries – processed food, beverages, hotels and transportation. Hotels, tourism, aviation and transportation became the most affected sectors and brought the earnings of the people to low. All public transport services had been suspended till the end of March in India. The people who were close to the poverty line were worst affected by the pandemic. The financial and stock markets were down by more than 40%, and reverted back to 2016 level [1].

Corona Virus Disease-2019 (COVID-19) pandemic had increased the financial burden of Indians by crippling the Indian economy and contributed less to the socioeconomic

ABSTRACT

The coumarin derivative ((4-chloro-6-methyl-2-oxo-2H-chromen-3-yl) methylene) benzene-sulfonylhydrazide was synthesized by condensation reaction, characterized by spectroscopic techniques (¹H NMR, ¹³C NMR, FTIR, UV-Vis, TGA and DSC) and finally the structure was confirmed by X-ray diffraction method. The thermal studies showed that the title compound is thermally stable up to 200°C and they undergo endothermic decomposition at higher temperatures. The crystal structure revealed that the compound crystallizes in P $\bar{1}$ space group. The compound exhibits diverse intermolecular interactions including C-H...O, N-H...O, C-H...Cl type of hydrogen bonds, C-Cl...Cg and Cg...Cg interactions. The molecules form alternative R₂²(14) and R₄⁴(20) supramolecular synthons through intermolecular hydrogen bonds which connect them to an infinite one-dimensional chain along [0 11] direction. The Hirshfeld surface analysis showed that H...H (29.4%) and O...H (28.7%) are the major intermolecular interactions. Further the structure was optimized using density functional theory (DFT) calculations. The optimized geometrical parameters show very good agreement with those determined by XRD method. The time dependent density functional theory (TDDFT) calculation was used to study electronic transition among the first 15 molecular orbitals. The calculated electronic absorption spectrum compliments the experimentally measured UV-Vis spectrum.
